City Ordinance Section 20-110(e)(2) provides that if you die while employed as a City employee from causes not directly related to your employment that your designated beneficiary(s) would receive a monthly benefit equal to fifty (50) percent of your monthly pensionable earnings as of your last date of active employment, until the earlier of ninety-six (96) months of payments or the death of the last surviving beneficiary.

Important (Please Read):

A primary beneficiary is the person(s) who is first in line for benefits. A contingent beneficiary is the person(s) who is second in line for benefits if your spouse or other primary beneficiary(s) die before you or is ineligible to receive any benefit due. If your intent is to for all benefits to be payable first to your spouse if they are living, then designate your spouse only as the primary beneficiary. You can then designate anyone else such as your children as contingent beneficiary(s) to receive benefits should your spouse not be living at the time of your death.

Several options exist for the basis of sharing benefits:

1. In order, if living basis is paid 100% to the first beneficiary if they are living. If the first beneficiary is not living then it gets paid to the second beneficiary and then lastly to the third.
2. Equal share basis splits the benefit equally among the living beneficiaries.
3. Percentage basis is paid in the percentages designated. If one or more of these beneficiaries are not living then it is prorated at the same ratio among the remaining beneficiaries.

It is extremely important that you keep your designation of beneficiary(s) current. Update the pension office immediately after any changes in life circumstances such as death, marriage, divorce, or birth of new children.

Under Florida State Statutes, a divorce might invalidate the designation of your spouse as a beneficiary. Your ex-spouse can still be a beneficiary after divorce but you should complete and submit a revised Designation of Beneficiary Form dated after the divorce to the pension office.

You may designate whomever you wish to be your beneficiary(s) for off-the-job death benefits but not a trust. The Board of Trustees recognizes only those designations which are received by the pension office prior to the member's death. A trust is not an acceptable beneficiary designation.

This form supersedes and revokes any and all prior designations and primary/contingent beneficiary(s).

Forms that appear to be modified or altered in any way will not be accepted.

Please complete this form very carefully, if you have any questions do not hesitate to contact the pension office at 954-828-5171.
